DID YOU KNOW that CHIROPRACTORS STUDY at UNIVERSITY FULL TIME for a MINIMUM of FIVE YEARS?

Chiropractors are highly trained professionals. Chiropractic training in Australia involves five year university courses. These courses are of similar length and depth as medical courses. Chiropractic courses focus strongly on anatomy, physiology, pathology, neurology, x-ray, bio-mechanics and adjustment techniques. Chiropractic courses also require extensive practice hours. This level of study ensures doctors of chiropractic are the unparalleled experts in spinal health.

“A typical university semester for a chiropractor.

Independent government and medical studies in the U.S., Sweden and New Zealand have concluded that chiropractic education is the equivalent of medical education in all of the basic sciences*.”

A chiropractor’s education never ends. After entering practice, doctors of chiropractic are strongly recommended by the CAA to complete continuing professional development courses and attend training seminars to upgrade and improve their skills and stay up to date with the latest scientific research.

The CAA takes continuing professional development extremely seriously and ensures its members adhere to the strictest educational standards.

Each week, approximately 200,000 Australians rely on the specialised expertise of chiropractors for a broad range of health reasons.

So if you want to make the most of life, why not discover for yourself why there’s so much more to chiropractic.
